National spotlight on Pagham as sea closes in on homes

While no losses were damaged during the stormy weather much of the defence which was completed in December, were taken by the sea. Arun District Council has been working to protect properties from further risks while the Environment Agency is looking at a longer term solution to the problem.

Mr Piddie, a self-confessed pessimist, said that he'd visited Pagham frequently in the past, and remembered the beach as it used to be. After listening to what people had to say, he said that he was impressed with the strength and unity of the community after that had encountered, and was leaving Pagham "that old school".

He added: "It's been a tremendous visit and extremely interesting, which is really good. People seem to be working very closely together and having intelligent arguments in terms of what to do next. I don't know what will happen but I do know people who do know. I will make sure the arguments are addressed".

Paul Dorey, AIC Chichester

Member for the Environment, said that the main issue on the shopping list was:

- Consultations regarding funding the emergency work through the relevant schemes

- Support towards the Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) process (money and political support) to block out out through the project
- Support in the design of formula for partnership funding

After the visit, Councillor Dorey and Mr Piddie was "very receptive". He added: "We would welcome any consultation from the Government and to agree that will benefit the communities we serve".

The EIA, which could cost up to £100,000, would be funded via DEFRA, not DCLG, so while Mr Piddie can't commit money, what he can do is sit, sit support, and commitment to help in Pagham's behalf.

The New Pagham Beach Facebook page said that "while the support of a potential 'bodyweight' such as Eric Piddie is a big plus, residents are accepting that none of this is going to happen overnight. However, it must be noted as a step forward, and that, while we can't stop the tide, it may at last be starting to turn in our favour".

Fraudsman to surrender criminal profits

ALLCOTRIMAN already warned to its clients after identifying purchasers of one of its largest and most kinds of hi-tech equipment for use in copyright theft—over found in the UK, has now to surrender some of his criminal profits.

30-year old Keith Temple, of Loomis Road, Palmyra, was arrested at Chatham Green Court on Tuesday 3 December. He had previously pleaded guilty to an offence. He had admitted one offence of distributing articles infringing copyright, two of money laundering + total of £400,000 one of transferring criminal property + computer + two of possessing prohibited weapons + pepper spray and a stun gun.

He was sentenced to 22 months' immediate imprisonment for the dated-note offence, eight months to run consecutively for one of the money-laundering offences, another three months to run consecutively for the transfer of criminal property offence, three months also to run consecutively for the other money-laundering offence, another three months to run consecutively plus the six-year offence and three months also to run consecutively for the seven-year offence.

At a Proceeds of Crime Act (POCA) confirmation hearing at the same venue on Thursday 27 February, Tuckey was ordered to pay £100,000.

Police, supported by anti-gravity investigators from BPA, the trade body for the British recorded music industry, had executed search warrants at two addresses in the town on Tuesday morning 15 November 2005.

Tambling was arrested at one of them, a flat over a shop in Roper High Street, and police also searched his home in Beaumont Road, Fulham, on suspicion of conspiracy to commit movie-copyright laws, and money laundering offences.

At first, the police and investigators found more than one full computer hard drive, an estimated 30,000 CDs and DVDs, computers and 6 multiple key logging devices which compare registered to computer users. Microsoft software at Apple Computer of 30,000 files distributed to an extensive client base was also stored. All the material stored took a month to retrieve.

Derek Wood, Director of Anti-Forgery for the BPC/British Record Music Collection Ltd said: 'I would

Mr. de la Haza thanks British Police for co-ordinating efforts to disrupt the public production of counterfeit music, film and game software. The case was significant in that it was one of the largest domestic seizures uncovered to date in the UK. It had the capability of manufacturing and distributing counterfeit product on a truly international scale.

Detectives Constable Nigel Tilling of the Sussex Police Economic Crime Unit said, "We worked closely with the EPO and were able to establish Tumbon's full role in the case."

"We have now secured a court injunction order against Tansko under POCSO to take back his custody of at least some of his criminal profile."

Our expert financial investigators stated that Tomlinson had over time acquired more than $50,000 in benefits but had spent most of it.

The money goes to the entire membership, but 50% of the money goes back to law enforcement. Of that 50%, one third goes to the Crime Prevention Bureau, one third to IBM Courts Systems and one third to police to help support financial institutions.

Chichester district dog walkers warned of substance on benches

CHICHESTER DISTRICT COUNCIL is warning dog owners to keep pets away from any white substance they may find on local benches.

The council last week warned that there is a potential for pain oil to be washed up on the district's benches.

The oil may appear as white balls which are likely to be natural, unrefined, oil and organic matter. They are commonly washed up on benches following stormy weather.

As a precaution, the council is advising people not to touch the balls or allow pets to sit it.

The benches remain open as usual and the council will continue to monitor the situation. If anyone finds anything resembling the description described contact the council on safety@chichester.gov.uk and we will arrange for it to be removed.

Click to control your adult social care support

WITH ONE click of a finger, all residents at West Sussex will now be able to find information to help them to continue to live independently.

From April this year, West Sussex County Council will be leading the introduction of a new live website, in association with social care website provider shopuplink, for all residents at West Sussex who need advice and support about living independently. Whether or not they receive funded support from the County Council.

Called 'My Street Smart' in support, it will let people find out information and advice about services available to them. It will also let them include the input of others directly from the providers or even other residents.

Services available to the website could include home care, lunchtime clubs, day activities and befriending services, or perhaps that can help them to find out about services or providers. It also provides information and advice about existing financial social care support from the county.

Paul Gedge, West Sussex County Council's Cabinet Member for Adult Social Care and Health, said: "The site will help people to choose the support they feel suits them and means that planning their care should be simpler, easier, more user friendly and accessible at a time that suits them."

"Residents will be able to find the things they need to do independently and at the same time stand of our ambition to improve choice and control for customers within adult services."

shopuplink founder David Jones said: "This partnership represents another significant leap forward for shopuplink. Having pioneered the whole concept of user web-based options to deliver cloud-based, we've now been awarded our licence to use the technology of the One 20. The whole team here at shopuplink are looking forward to developing our day-to-day relationship with the people and providers of West Sussex."

Meanwhile, with James Jones, chairman and local resident Tyler Paul, representing our services from the County Council and has helped in the work development. Tyler said: "I think great and I look forward to helping develop a further."

"It's really easy to see and share the power to find support that fits around their lives."

“Our objectives as a design business are simple; to enjoy what we do, deliver good design, oversee sound and robust construction that is both cost effective and affordable”

INTERIOR DESIGN & REINTERIORS

A SMALL, but very experienced and dynamic Chichester-based design business, Made In Place prides themselves on their competitively priced and affordable consultancy service which promotes value for money, quality service and often completing projects ahead of schedule and under budget. While most of their client base is still very much in London, they have an international presence having completed projects in Toronto, Dallas, Perth, America and across Europe.

Current and previous projects include both commercial and domestic projects as well as refurbishment and interior design, including retail & office design, showrooms, exhibitions, furniture and bespoke projects.

Known for their long standing working relationship with Popcorn (which, gone back around 20 years) they designed every Popcorn store that exists in the world which lead to them winning the retail week design award but store built (globally) for the Popcorn Group store in October 2013. They have also worked with blue chip companies including Reichen, Sonabuy's & United Airways.

Benefiting from their relationships with a sophisticated network of specialist contractors and contractors across their way to get to the heart of design means quickly enabling resolution of on site issues and in turn costs, allowing clients to engage directly with design specialists.

Remember that "green issues" as we applied and realistic way, Made In Place believe this future has to be put in the hands of the individual with the primary objective being to respond and deliver as possible and not very focused on not doing unnecessary work, or making unnecessary things, resulting in design that are simple in their delivery.

Their focus is what's important, what people enjoy with, what people are and need – as noted by their team as the "march of the day approach" – providing their clients with only what's really needed, the added highlights as to speak.

Deploying the process with their client buildings, they try to replace and up-cycle where ever possible. With Popcorn's stores, 95% of those produced in the last eight years actually achieve a energy ratings which is almost unheard level of an commercial properties.

They also recently completed a new bar project in Woking which is almost entirely made of recycled and up cycled products, including furniture made out of an old oak floor.

Taking "green issues" even further with their domestic projects, they are currently working as their first "purchase" refurbishment, in the heart of the area of strong consumption, focusing on a future first approach (keeping last made a building) meaning that way little energy is required to run a house. The project is designed to be super efficient and will function as a perfect model for a housing system.

If you have a commercial or domestic project in the future contact Made In Place for an affordable, expert alternative and see what you can achieve from your space, in a green way.

'My adult classes are full of ladies who either danced in their youth or who never danced, but always wanted to, and I think they enjoy it for a variety of reasons' and Angela. 'Yoga, pilates, co-ordination, muscle therapy, stretching and the overriding experience they all share, I believe, is a great sense of achievement' the emphasis has a wonderful camaraderie develops which results in a supportive, non-competitive and fun environment for learning. 'Working on ballet or contemporary dance can be very daunting for novices but the release and freedom which comes from simply moving in the space is well worth the effort. There are no expectations or requirements other than a willingness to learn' Angela explains, 'Dance is a more sustained and challenging discipline whereas contemporary or pop dance is fun which releases the mid-child within'.

'Having also worked as a professional actress in many areas of theatre including musicals, comedy and theatre-in-education Angela passionately believes that the skills one develops as a performer in both dance and drama are valuable to most one throughout life. The classes Dance Innovation offer to children include theatre studies (musical and comedy), ballet, tap and modern dance and tend to focus on building quality techniques and discipline alongside the development of the stagecraft required to perform with confidence and joy. The dance classes focus on skills like expression and ensemble work, aimed at developing a sense of teamwork and confidence through play. Dance Innovation recently completed its Chichester Festival for Dance, Dance & Drama with great success and many more winning performances including a place for the under 16 years class members required to get place for the adult amateur tap group, although Angela stresses there is absolutely no pressure to involve yourself in any performance,

Britains greatest little chocolate company here in Chichester

DELLY AND SIMON Potnam were formerly lawyers at a leading London law firm, practising employment and shipping law respectively. Having agreed that 'there has to be more to life than that', they packed in their jobs, sold their houses and set off on a backpacking expedition around South America.

On the way, they found inspiration in the Argentinian Lake District, where they discovered a thriving chocolate industry. They realised that they found their life in the UK, whilst adding their own unique twist to the chocolate making experience.

Founded by Dilly and Simon in 2006, Montezuma's is a family owned, British chocolate company and has rapidly built a reputation for producing some of the finest and most innovative chocolate available in the UK. The creative team of chocolatiers take every opportunity to experiment with new flavours and ingredients specialising in the use of spices, herbs and essential oils.

Montezuma's entire range of chocolate bars, truffles and drinking chocolate is made by hand near the beach in Montserrat.

Recent awards and accolades include the Chichester Observer Business of the Year Award, Orange Food Awards, Great Taste Awards and being listed by Food Network as 'best chocolate in its class' as the chocolate of Montezuma's is the Chocolate Superhero.

Montezuma's is also very proud to have been awarded Green Business of the Year by Chichester District Council for its huge efforts in creating an environmentally friendly factory and its ongoing green activity. Our most recent achievement was being voted 'Best New Product Range' by the Good Housekeeping Cookery team.

Montezuma's believe strongly in its responsibility to the community. Its own policy of 'Trading Fairly' incorporates ethical dealing with its cocoa growers but outside this conduct to ensure they come into contact with including suppliers, customers and staff.

Montezuma's also has a focus with clients bigger than its products

award winning British chocolate

However, Montezuma's has for many years supported the Chichester-based charity Children on the Edge in its fundraising efforts. This includes charity work with orphaned children around the world, building orphanages and schools to help in war torn countries or areas destroyed by natural disasters.

Montezuma's donates staff time and chocolate to various charity initiatives. Before Christmas, children's chocolate making days, sponsored races and many others. In 2013, they sent more than 55,000 through a sweet bag donation scheme and many other initiatives. £10,000 goes for a whole year of cocoa beans, tree huts, stationary, art materials and games for 3,500 children in Bangladesh.

New exhibition: 20ME12 and Beyond

PULLNIT HOUSE GALLERY has launched a new exhibition in the Studio showcasing the work of participants from the 20ME12 project from 4 - 13 March. The aim of the project was to enable people with learning difficulties and others facing barriers to the art world to showcase their artistic skills and connections through existing technology.

The 20ME12 project, a collaborative project between Pallant Arts, Pullnit House Gallery and MSAP Openwork Group, took the form of three different series of arts and technology workshops facilitated by Sally Christopher from Pallant Arts and Jo Offer, an inclusion artist from England.

The project encouraged participants to think about how lines written on the content of the events and exhibitions that took place in these lectures using film photography, film, painting, digital artwork. A key feature of this was the collaboration and development of skills using iPads and photo editing programmes.

Sally Christopher, Pallant Arts and 20ME12 project facilitator says: "This exhibition is the culmination of a new thinking and direction for many of the artists. All of the images have been created using technology at some stage, whether using an art app on iPad, digitally manipulating an existing piece of art using Photoshop, or a fusion of traditional and digital printing.

Many of the artists are now skilled iPad artists, confident and eager to explore and develop their own practice using technology. Armed with their new tool, they've often moved their art into the online world, and participate on social media, whilst other participants have taken their art from their existing skill base, gaining knowledge specific to their personal needs and goals."

20ME12 and Beyond will be in the Studio at the Gallery from 4 - 13 March 2014. Free entry. Refreshments free. Dates: 4 - 13 March 2014.

Top tips to maintain your cars value

THE 2007 expensive car ever sold was a 1999 Mercedes-Benz W140, which reached more than half-a-million at auction in 2010. Needless to say, this was way more than a car actually representing its price, in part because of its rarity but on the original value of a car compared to the biggest expense to a car owner. Fortunately, there are a few ways in which it is possible to keep depreciation down to a minimum.

Regular Check Ups

One of the biggest causes of depreciation in cars is damage caused by everyday wear and tear. One part of the car that can be particularly badly hit is the engine, a complicated lot of equipment with a lot of moving parts that could potentially get damaged over the years. The badly worn and typical car displays a battery, along with the value of the car. One way to keep wear and tear damage down is to reduce the overall mileage of a car but this can be an inconvenience solution if a vehicle is needed regularly. Likewise, accidents can pose problems if it's too late to a car. A simple solution is to take your car in to a garage for a regular check-up. A service straight forward to book, at 2 1/2 M. While you can book online at www.panthertruckrental.co.uk, and helps to identify any problem with the car early, which can then be sorted out quickly rather than being left to worsen.

Buy second hand

When a new car is driven out of a dealership for the first time, it loses an average 20% of its original value, this works out as the steepest period of depreciation in the lifetime of a car. This is a big hit to take but one that can be easily mitigated by buying second hand. Once, nearly new cars can represent a huge saving. However, when buying a second hand car, it is always important to make sure that the vehicle has a full service history and is in full working order. It is also a good idea to avoid models that have had long race type modifications as these can result in higher maintenance costs. If you do end up buying new, then you can help to lessen the impact of depreciation by only selecting optional extras that are likely to add value to a car when it comes to reselling, such as alloy wheels and air conditioning.

Choose wisely

New cars may be cheap up front, however, the hidden cost of a vehicle can often be its rate of depreciation. Conversely, an expensive model may keep more of its resale value. It is important to research the reputation of depreciation of a certain model before going ahead with a deal. Fuel efficient cars tend to keep their value for longer, while there are certain models that have a track record of losing value quicker than others. For instance, the Volvo V40 is well known for its popularity with business people, loses 20% of its value within six months. A similar drop in value can be seen in the Renault Grand Scenic 1.6i Dynamique and the Toyota Auris 1.6i 4D 115 CV.

12411702408, also finally got their county youth league campaign back underway after a lengthy six week break caused by the recent bad weather. They were understandably a bit rusty after the long break but were soon back into the swing of things with Joe Yates recording play on his debut.

Despite long periods of possession it was not until November that they finally broke the deadlock, when some good work down the left found the powerful Strauss-Madongo in the box who roared the keeper to alert the ball in the back of the net.

In the second half she started slowly and very nearly caught me.
